

Jerome Mayne Bio

Jerome Mayne is founder and CEO of the former Neighborhood Redevelopment Corp., Mayne Mortgage and Fraudcon, Inc. He now focuses on Mayne Speakers, Inc. and is one of the premier keynote business speakers on ethics, choices, and consequences in corporate America.

In 1994 Jerome was a normal employee; a young professional in real-estate finance. He met some unsavory customers but cut ties with them after a 6-month association. Over the next 4 years, he found entrepreneurial success. In 1998 he was arrested and charged with conspiracy to commit mail fraud, wire fraud and money laundering; charges that stemmed from his business dealings in 1994. This resulted in a 21-month prison sentence and his life was changed forever.

Jerome has written dozens of articles for industry trade publications and developed professional continuing education courses. The personal diary of his life, in the business world and behind bars is documented in, Diary of a White-Collar Criminal is available, self-narrated on Audible.

For over 20 years, with wit and passion, Jerome brings a transformative experience, sparking critical conversations about accountability, personal growth and protecting freedom of employees and the company's bottom line.

Jerome is also a former touring stand-up comedian.
